

A Collaboration

Score by Sean Thomas Boyt
STBDancing.com

1. Think of a friend or colleague that might want to hang out with you for a bit.
2. Contact them (phone, e-mail, message, text, face-to-face, etc.)
3. See if they would actually like to meet with you, and allow them to say they don't want to
4. Determine a place
5. Make sure your place is available and within your budget (rental, coffee, beer, whatever)
6. Schedule a time that works in both of your schedules and the space's
7. Allow your mind and body to process what it may mean to be in this place together
8. Continue your own creative journey to continue before meeting with your partner
9. Confirm your participation on the day of
10. Try to arrive at least sort-of on time to your scheduled meeting
11. Once the other party has arrived, chat about whatever is going on in your lives
12. Maybe do a couple moves
13. Sit back down with your planner to figure out the next time you'll meet
14. It'll likely be in a month

Half of the dance is just getting there and the intention behind the work.